This interesting photo was sent to me in October of 2010 by a woman in Rye, New York. She spotted a deer in her neighbor's yard and took a photo of it using her BlackBerry. Only later did she notice what appeared to be a face just to the left of the animal looking straight into the camera. While this could be a case of pariedolia, if it is, it's an unusual one, especially as the image appears to include flesh tones. There also seems to be the suggestion of an upper torso and possibly even a full body underneath it. There is no evidence of Photoshop being used or of hoaxing. *(Used with permission.
